Again has Dame Rumor plighted the troth of the one marriageable Astor mals to the fair Miss Willing, of Philadelphia. The report has broken out like a rash two or three times before. These several times it has reared its beautiful head only to shrivel almost as soon as the wondrous beauty of such an alliance was seen and marvelled at. Experience seems to prove that any man can marry. Some woman will take him. But in the case of "JACKY" ASTOR the centiment seems to prevail that any woman capable of entering into the bands of wedlock would jump at him. The subject is one almost as momentor and enthralling as that other of whether "JACKY's" mamma is Mrs. Aston, or only Mrs. WILLIAM ASTOR. It brings out all the truly democratic sentiment of our republican society. We are a great and simple people.

CONJUGAL DEVOTION.

The husband of the woman whose scalp was torn from her head has gladly offered his cuticle for repairing certain ravages which the socident has left in the skin o his wife. He gladly consents to having large patches of epidermis transferred from his arms and legs to the cranium of the partner of his joys.

This is an example which wives may hold up to their husbands as a proof of what ony may be in its perfect and beauti ful flower. It is not often that the marital contract is carried out with such severe literalness in the "flesh of thy flesh" con-

One Governor is a very usual and proper functionary of a full-fledged State. When there becomes more than one such officer to a single State embarrassing complications must arise. Nebraska, with an Indian war threatening her on the one hand, has three claimants for the Executive office quarrelling on the other. It is not a pleasant spectacle.

"You can't frighten a blacksnake," said one old hunter, "and the more you try to the more he ain't frightened. A rattlesnake is a coward, and will run if you give him half a chance. If he doesn't get the chance he will rattle in fear, and then strike in descriptions.

"A rattiesnake's bite is not nearly so dai-gerous as many people suppose. All that you have to do to render the wound harm-less is to cut it as deep as the fangs went, No Blots on the Escutcheon.
